The City Different is home to a unique kind of magic that comes to life in summer. The bright, sunny days and cool mountain nights provide the perfect backdrop for the city's unique artistic culture.

One shining example of the diverse Santa Fe arts scene is Mow Wolf, an interactive art experience created by a collective of nearly 200 artists. Art, storytelling, and entertainment like you never have seen before in the 20,000 square foot House of Eternal Return. Mow Wolf's first permanent installation.

As you stroll through the city in summertime, Santa Fe's eclectic musical culture breathes life into your trip. Join the party in late August during Santa Fe's first ever Music Week, featuring a variety of national and local acts. From jazz to bluegrass, to good old fashioned rock 'n' roll—performing in outdoor music venues, bars, and sunlit restaurant patios.

Santa Fe's art markets and galleries bring vibrant cultures and talented artists and artisans together. With more than 250 galleries to explore, you'll be astonished by the city's variety of creativity. And the city's famed art markets celebrate Santa Fe's diverse cultures. Whether you're in town for July's International Folk Art Market, the vibrant Spanish Market, or the Indian Market in August, you're sure to find something you'll treasure.

All this and more are waiting for you this summer in Santa Fe. Check out the event calendar on santafe.org to find events that are happening for specific dates. Plan your trip today.
